Bloomberg’s Slavery and Human Trafficking statement

Bloomberg is a global business and financial information and news leader. The company’s strength – delivering data, news, and analytics through innovative technology, quickly and accurately – is at the core of the Bloomberg Professional service (Bloomberg Terminal), which provides real time financial information to approximately 325,000 subscribers globally.

Bloomberg is headquartered in the United States and employs nearly 19,000 employees in 192 locations around the world. Our direct supply chain involves the sourcing of goods and services to support the manufacturing, assembly, distribution and infrastructure of the Bloomberg Terminal and the publishing and distribution of our printed news products. In addition Bloomberg sources products and services to support general operational needs.

Our anti-slavery policy reflects our commitment to acting ethically and with integrity in all our business relationships. We expect those in our supply chain to align with our values and operate in accordance with the principles of the Bloomberg Supplier Code of Conduct and in full compliance with all applicable laws and regulations. The Bloomberg Supplier Code of Conduct outlines Bloomberg’s expectations for Supplier conduct regarding labour and human rights, health and safety, environmental protection, ethics, and management practices.

To identify and mitigate risks associated with slavery and human trafficking we have in place systems that:

- increasingly require suppliers who participate in a formal tender process (Request for Information or Request for Proposal) to accept Bloomberg’s Supplier Code of Conduct
- perform social audits in targeted facilities within our supply chain that are the most vulnerable to threats of human trafficking, slavery and other related violations
- monitor potential risk areas in our supply chains
- protect whistleblowers.

Bloomberg is proud of its efforts to combat slavery and human trafficking and is committed to maintaining and continuing efforts to improve our practices to ensure that there is no modern slavery or human trafficking in our supply chain or in any part of our business. To that end, we have engaged a partner to train our employees on the significance and risks of slavery and human trafficking and their obligations in this context.

This statement is made pursuant to section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes our Group’s slavery and human trafficking statement for the financial year ending 2016.
