Supply

Table 5 shows that the AusBond Composite Index added A$12.15bn of new supply (issuances and taps) in June. The new supply was A$0.28bn lower than the previous month and A$1.38bn higher than the 12 month average (A$10.77bn). The largest contributors were Semi-Government issuers at A$6.25bn followed by Non-Government issuers at A$3bn and Treasuries at A$2.9bn. Seven new issues were added to the Composite Index amounting to A$1.9bn, which leaves A$10.25 in taps.

The new additions to the Composite Index were issued across four different sectors. TCV issued A$3.22bn fixed coupon bonds which is the largest amongst new issues in June. The largest tap was carried on the 1.5% June 2031 ACGB bond and NSWTC 3% April 2019 bond. Additionally, four Semi-Government issuers upsized in June: NSWTC (A$2.8bn), QTC (A$2.34bn), WATC (A$0.53bn) and TCV (A$0.26bn). The month of June also saw approximately A$6.1bn of buybacks and maturities.

The Bloomberg AusBond Indices are compared to the S&P/ASX 200 Index and S&P/NZX 50 Gross Index, respectively (collectively, the "S&P Indices"). The S&P/ASX 200 measures the performance of the 200 largest index-eligible stocks listed on the ASX by float-adjusted market capitalization, covering approximately 80% of Australian equity market capitalization. The S&P/NZX 50 Gross Index is designed to measure the performance of the 50 largest, eligible stocks listed on the Main Board (NZSX) of the NZX by float-adjusted market capitalization, covering approximately 90% of New Zealand equity market capitalization. The volatility of the S&P Indices may be materially different from that of the Bloomberg AusBond Indices. In addition, the membership in Bloomberg AusBond Indices differs significantly from the securities that comprise the S&P Indices. The S&P Indices have not been selected to represent appropriate benchmarks to compare the performance of Bloomberg AusBond Indices, but rather are disclosed to allow for comparison of Bloomberg AusBond Indices to well-known and widely recognized indices.
